

Arco Iris mnemonics

July 2014

Mnemonics are a great way to learn rhythms. However, when learning them, it is important that you get the rhythm correct in the first place! This list is compiled from contributions from various band members. It is hoped that if you're struggling to learn a piece, you might find a helpful mnemonic here. Then at the next practice when you hear the rhythm, try and fit the words to it. Don't worry if you can't! Mnemonics aren't for everyone and a particular mnemonic might work well for one person and not for another. Note that writing mnemonics to convey some kind of rhythm is tricky and easily misinterpreted ... so don't necessarily trust any spaces or hyphens in mnemonics!

Another way to help learn the pieces is to pick out parts of the rhythm that group together. For example the low surdo pattern for Bathhouse Ragga consists of two hits followed by a group of four hits. If you do learn pieces this way be especially careful to note the timing of the pattern (the same goes for mnemonics too). In the Bathhouse Ragga example, I know that the group of two hits starts on beat 2 of the bar and the group of four hits starts on beat 4. This is important and makes sure I can play the pattern in time.

I encouraged (challenge!) you to make up your own mnemonics, it doesn't matter if there's more than one mnemonic for the same part. If you do come up with one, send a quick email to the Webmaster or Musical Coordinator so they can add it to this list, it might be of benefit to someone else! And remember, with mnemonics, the more silly the better!
